THE following Index is a synoptical view of the English Poets in these particulars; namely, in prudential, moral and religious sentences; in remarkable proverbial sayings, either of a ludicrous or serious turn; in characters of celebrated persons, both ancient and modern; in descriptions of places and countries, and in accounts of remarkable events, either in the natural or political world, and of the ancient customs or antiquities; in critical observations on poets and poetry, by Dryden, Addison, Pope, &c. with strong remonstrances against the vile prostitution of the gift of heaven to impure and immoral purposes:

the whole in the words of the poets, when they could conveniently be brought within the compass of a line, and in the very arrangement of their words, in order to preserve entire the harmony and emphasis of the sentence, more especially in the proverbial sayings, which are much of the same nature with the sententious, differing only in point of authority, the latter being the result of the observation of the wise and learned, and expressed with dignity; but the former, that of the vulgar, and generally as vulgarly expressed, yet equally true with the sententious. Proverbial sayings could not well be disarranged, without spoiling them, or at least making them sound harsh to an ear unaccustomed to an unusual arrangement. When a quality stands alone, without the express mention of its subject, either person or thing,

But which it necessarily implies, it is in all languages, both learned and unlearned, taken substantively; it may therefore lead the sentence, according to the general rule of index-making; namely, that a substantive is always to be the leading word; the truth of which will be considered hereafter. For instance, we say, the virtuous, the vicious, &c. with respect to persons; and with respect to a thing, the good, the ill, the vain, &c. of life. When quality and subject are both expressed together, I consider them as one word; both on account of their necessary connection; and especially, because the stress of the sentence turns upon them: I therefore scruple not to make them the leading words: Dryden, for instance, to mention no other, says, lively faith bears aloft the mind: if the above rule, namely that of always making a substantive to lead the sentence, be made an invariable and universal rule, it will necessarily exclude, from a place in an index, very many important sentences, which are without a substantive. Dryden again says, write well, or not at all: I therefore scrupled not to make a verb the leading word; or even an adverb, if used emphatically; for instance, greatly wise to talk with our past hours, Young. I endeavoured all along, in the arrangement, to form some connection between the articles under the same alphabetical head, unless where they happen to be contradictory, and which the order of the alphabet, and not their connection, brought together.

 Beauty,

- Beauty,
 ——— Anacreontic,
 ——— is but a spell,
 ——— a riddle,
 ——— Pandora's box of good and harm,
 ——— blew the flames, that ruin'd Troy,
 ——— progress of,
 ——— by no complection is defin'd,
 ——— is of all colours, and to none confin'd,
 ——— not meant to vex, but please,
 ——— should be kind, as well as charm,
 ——— to thee we owe gay wit and moving eloquence,
 ——— from thee painters derive their skill,
 ——— to thee the poet tunes his lays,
 ——— dies, while love is frowning,
 ——— power of,
 ——— to conquer, dreadful in its charms,
 ——— conquers rudest minds,
 ——— cynosure of neighbouring eyes,
 ——— captives all,
 ——— to draw true, shews a master's hand,
 ——— joined with virtue, powerful,
 ——— softly binds the chain,
 ——— powerful glance of,
 ——— draws us with a single hair,
 ——— unchaste, is beauty in disgrace,
 ——— perfect, but of guilty fame,
 ——— what cruel destiny waits on,

 Beauty,

- Beauty, fatal to the owners,
 ——— undone by beauty,
 ——— what hourly nonsense haunts,
 ——— fantastic,
 ——— admir'd by weak minds,
 ——— the wise man's passion, the vain man's toast,
 ——— to write in praise of, hard task,
 ——— tho' injurious, has charms,
 ——— like wit, to judges should be shewn,
 ——— proper sphere, the town, the court,
 ——— let rest serene and ever pleas'd,
 ——— withers like a shrivel'd flower,
 ——— fair flower ! soon fades away,
 ——— flower of, quickly lost its pride,
 ——— faded has no second spring,
 ——— ah ! how frail, how vain,
 ——— a frail thing,
 ——— borne swift away upon the wings of Time,
 ——— like a shadow flies,
 ——— but a transient good at best,
 ——— like flowers, it withers,
 ——— who trusts to, trusts the fading rose,
 ——— frail flower, that every season fears,
 ——— but a varnish,
 ——— which time and accidents will tarnish,
 ——— and virtue seldom join'd,
 ——— hard lot of,
 ——— soon grows familiar,
 ——— the gift of Gods, the sex's pride,
 ——— shall no more my passion move,

 — of raging love, her virtues all her own, Smith 188
 — in your person or your face correct, Cong. 122
 Faults

- Faults in other men we spy,
 Favour, too great is safely plac'd on none,
 Favourite has no friend,
 Favours come from caprice, not from choice,
 ——— unexpected doubly please,
 Fawning cringe be far,
 Fawns, a prey to every savage,
 Fear, ode to,
 ——— thy hurried step, thy haggard eye,
 ——— back recoil'd,
 ——— freezes minds,
 ——— is an ague,
 ——— pale comrade of inglorious flight,
 ——— and Flight, yoke Mars's chariot,
 ——— spring of our actions,
 ——— its effects on men,
 ——— gives swallows wings,
 ——— no human fate exempt from,
 ——— false alarms of, self-delusion,
 ——— does greater feats than courage,
 ——— in public councils, betrays like treason,
 ——— does half the work of lying fame,
 ——— buries fear, and ills on ills attend,
 ——— of death less base than fear of life,
 ——— for ever lie entomb'd,
 ——— worshipping with,
 Fearful with reproaches fire,
 ——— and the brave, all sink alike,
 Fearless lover wants no beam of light,
 ——— belongs to Venus, and can never stray,

—— described,	Garib. 60
	Fortune,

- Fortune, incertainty of,
 ——— fickle,
 ——— goodyship of,
 ——— address to,
 ——— Author's compared with others' distress,
 ——— fair, like all thy treacherous kind,
 ——— faithless still, and wavering as the wind,
 ——— gives us birth,
 ——— entrust to powers above,
 ——— an unrelenting foe to love,
 ——— busy to join the gentle to the rude,
 ——— is the common mistress of us all,
 ——— can depress or advance,
 ——— never worshiped by the wise,
 ——— is ador'd by fools alone,
 ——— the wise man always makes his own,
 ——— leads a wild-goose chase,
 ——— mocks with a smiling face,
 ——— none is sincerely blest,
 ——— what can she give beyond content?
 ——— befriends the bold,
 ——— fights on Cæsar's side,
 ——— favours, still the fair are kind,
 ——— nor courted smiles, nor sunk beneath her frown,
 ——— push not by ill means,
 ——— smiles of never blest the bad,
 ——— frowns of, never rob innocence of joys,
 ——— all ask, and ask no more,
 ——— we most unjustly partial call,
 ——— and cowardice succeed,

Fragments,
- Fragment,

- Fragments,
 Frail is the boasted attribute of wife,
 — author dies before the man,
 — his fame is more contracted than his span,
 — thoughts dally with false surmise,
 Frailties are his children's spots,
 Frailty,
 — not unusual to woman,
 France, land of levity, land of guilt,
 — staple of new modes,
 — on universal sway intent,
 — is she the standard of your skill?
 — to Philips, as to Churchill, bends,
 Frantic flights are like a madman's dream,
 — like castles built in air,
 — heroes and gods to different sides divide,
 Fraud various, virtue one,
 — should with fraud be paid,
 — what he got by, is lost by stocks,
 — in the fox,
 Fray described,
 Frazer (Dr.) verses to,
 Free, the brave, wise, honest man alone,
 — proof to grandeur, pride and pelf,
 — and (greater still) is master of himself,
 — in every turn of fortune still the same,
 — from malice, live obscure,
 — liberty,
 — philosophy,
 Freeborn spirit no force can constrain,

Great

- Great objects make great minds,
 — rogues enjoy their state,
 — souls by instinct to each other turn,
 — wits to madness near allied,
 Greatest souls to goodness only bow,
 Greatly wise to talk with our past hours,
 Greatness,
 — by what actions grows,
 — pleasure from,
 — final cause of,
 — nearer viewed, ceases to charm,
 — embarrassment of,
 — insatiable,
 — a creature of fancy,
 — genuine, shuns the being great,
 Grecian plans reform Britannia's stage,
 Greece, hail Nature's utmost boast,
 — a country rich and gay,
 — second part of liberty,
 — one comedian,
 — slave and tutors of protecting Rome,
 — affords a train of lovely dames,
 — fam'd for steeds, for beauty more,
 — beauties,
 — the land of lovely dames,
 — has beauteous dames on every shore,
 — in her native fortitude elate,
 — honours not with solemn fasts the dead,
 — shone in genius, science, and in arts,
 — improv'd or found arts and sciences,
